Basically, I have a long string in the format of an edn-format. The string is separated by semicolon and ends with a quote. I want to convert this to a list of strings. I've been using `string.Split(";")` to do the conversion, but this gives me the error: Cannot implicitly convert type 'System.Collections.Generic.IEnumerable' to 'System.Collections.Generic.List'. An explicit conversion exists (are you missing a cast?) I believe I'm missing a cast. A: There's a whole class dedicated to this task: `System.IO.StringReader` A: `var s = "ColumnName1;ColumnName2;ColumnName3;"; var list = s.Split(';') .Select(p=> p.Trim());` A: If you want a List you can use `Enumerable.ToList()`: `var list = s.Split(";").ToList();`

Q: Use variables stored in the new line in an if statement (c)
I have 2 variables: `char ans;` `float f = 2.7;` i want to set a char in `ans` to `0` if the following statement is true: `f >= 2.7`
and `f`

requirement to create a PDF document that contains text with a set of different fonts. I have used the examples from the stackoverflow post Pdf converts logos from the same font as the document to another font but now I want the PDF document to come out with different fonts. So I have this in my php file

$result = shell_exec('/usr/local/bin/pdftk/'. $pdffilename. ' eof'. $pdffilename. ' cat 1 output'. $pdffilename);

it creates a PDF document fine but the problem is the document is using a font that is part of the PHP interpreter I have other pdf's being generated that are using different fonts so its not a font problem. I would really appreciate any help. A: The issue is almost certainly not in the PDF generator itself. The PDF generator is going to attempt to embed fonts from the file and no matter how
