Story highlights Mr. Borodulin told CNN the strike was against Koryo airline China and North Korea have had close ties Pyongyang, North Korea (CNN)Thousands of North Korean soldiers surrounded a northeastern Chinese town Sunday in an effort to prevent North Korean citizens from defying a Chinese ban on traveling to the South on Monday. The government-run Xinhua news agency said the soldiers arrived in northeastern Zaozhuang -- a town about 150 kilometers (93 miles) northeast of Beijing -- late Sunday night, following a directive from Pyongyang. It said the soldiers had occupied parts of the town and had held meetings with local officials. The soldiers also tried to stop North Koreans from entering nearby border areas, but were unsuccessful, according to the report. In early April, more than 100 Zaozhuang citizens flocked to the South to visit relatives, defying a Chinese ban of travel to the South. On Monday, those North Koreans who return to North Korea will be arrested and possibly expelled, CNN affiliate CCTV reported, citing an unnamed military official. Read More In a message aired by state-run radio Tuesday, the North Korean government said that citizens who had defied the ban had themselves to blame. "Fellow compatriots, who have illegally entered the South Korean territory as of April 6 and who have repeatedly violated the letter and spirit of the joint announcement and the decision issued by the Communist Party of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Worker's Party of Korea, must repent their illegal actions and those who have conspired with them must be severely punished," the North Korean government said, according to a transcript of the message. There is some speculation that the North Koreans may be referring to the March 27 inter-Korean summit between former South Korean President Roh Moo-hyun and Kim Jong-il, the father of the current North Korean leader Kim Jong-un. The two agreed to "permanently halt all hostile acts and establish permanent peace on the Korean Peninsula" and to remove all military tension between the b7e8fd5c8
