1. Introduction

For this alpha version of The Elden Ring of Tarnished Soul, there will be three main classes. Each has unique Class Skills as well as a set of sub-classes as a mix of the three power classes. When you select your class, your choices will have a role in your choice of grade and skill. This is reflected as experience points you obtain from battle that cause your rate of class advancement to increase.

Each class will be able to freely use sub-classes. Sub-classes are different brands and breeds of the parent class. These sub-classes can be freely combined with parent classes to create new sub-classes, and in addition, some sub-classes will be usable by other sub-classes.

2. Classes

Lords

Lords can broadly be called a hybrid of the classes of Mage, Archer and Warrior. Lords have gained their abilities from their class of origin, gaining large-scale and magical power in proportion to the tactics they know and the investment made in practicing the offensive skills of their class. Swords, shields and bows are all defenses that can be attached to weapons to add passive damage. Swords with traps, shields with barriers, and bows with stuns or slow are all effective ways of countering an opponent's offensive magic. When attached, damage will be taken over time. Skills and passive damages can be modified and equipped to become more specialized or more powerful. Lords receive a base strength bonus. They have a 1/16 system of hidden special classes, dark secrets that can be unlocked, to gain an additional sub-class with powerful offensive skills.

Peasants

Archons, the Holy Peasants, serve the people of Elden. A class accessible to merchants, clerics, priests, mages, and members of the nobility. Since everyone can enjoy protection from the the high defense of this prestige class, it attracts merchants who provide
