needs to release the Guantanamo detainees because "we're not getting valuable intelligence out of them," said the official. "What they know about al-Qaida is of great intelligence value because they have direct knowledge of the organization," said the official. The concern about the detainees being released in the wrong location, said the official, is less of a problem because the release will be fairly straightforward. "There's a way to keep them safe," said the official. The official also insisted that the administration "will be robust" in the fight against al-Qaida. "It's not the
