It is perhaps Iceland's most well-known film company, and many of its films have been very successful internationally. In 1995, Bónus entered into an arrangement with Icelandic Television (RÚV) for the company to be the exclusive television film producer in Iceland. The company's first television film, Blóm Brúðgumar, was produced in 1993 and aired on Icelandic Television in November 1994. Iceland is a country with an Icelandic language, culture, and rich natural landscapes. In fact, the country has an abundance of natural beauty, and home to some of the most remarkable features in the world. As a result, Bónus has produced more than a dozen films over the past several years. To date, Bónus has invested nearly 100 million Icelandic kronur on the production of its movies, as well as Icelandic films more generally. When Bónus started their production, they decided that it was important to do more than just producing movies; they also wanted to help the rural areas by establishing a film school in Akureyri. The design for this school was based on the "Bónus School of Film" in Paris, France. Bónus film company is also known for producing arthouse films, which can be rather light-hearted and fun, as well as serious films such as Eg þarf að njóta and Eg lýst hversu brúðgum þú veist, which have been both critically acclaimed and successful at the box office. In 2009, directors Árni and Ólafur based the movie Reykjavík was edited when the movie "Madness 1cdb3666d
